10th Annual
Mary Collins School Symposium

Please Join Us This Year in Welcoming: Peggy Albers and Jo Boaler

Dr. Jo Boaler
Professor of Mathematics Education, Stanford University

All children can experience enjoyment and success when learning mathematics, but very few do. We know how to give students positive experiences but there is a huge gap between what we know works, from research, and what happens in most classrooms. There is an urgent need to increase public understanding of the actions that we can all take to give students positive mathematical experiences.

Dr. Peggy Albers
Professor of English and Literacy Education, Georgia State University

Literacy today is more than reading and writing. Being literate in the 21st century takes the ability to critically access, interpret, and create meaning through multiple forms of expression. Alternate forms of communications—such as art, music, drama, film, multimedia, digital media, technologies and dance—play a crucial role in helping students cultivate these skills.

The Symposium is for listening, dialoging and reflecting about learning and knowing in order to strengthen the foundation of our teaching practice. Mary Collins, the principal of Mary Collins School from 1976—1982, believed that the best teaching and learning comes from a knowledge of the learning process. She believed it is the joy and duty of teachers to be lifelong learners. This symposium is presented in that spirit.
